MR. COMINGO'S SPEECH.

The St. Louis Times says: The Missouri member from the Sixth district. we are glad to see, placed himself on record the other day against the educational bill, in a very forcible and able criticism of its objectionable features. He deprecated the effort that had been made during the debate to evoke the KITCHEN, Koch, Lumson, Langton, Lat- spirit of party and rush the measure through, "under whip and spur," regardless of consequences, but held that the main proposition and the questions involved rose, or should rise, "above party interests and be determined by the inflexible rules of law and justice." Regarding the bill as in many respects expressly violative of the constitution he insisted that this consideration alone ought to settle its fate. Said he: "In no instance has Congress ever before the present time attempted to bribe the States in the manner proposed in this bill. It is offering a small but gilded pittance for a birthright .-One by one the safeguards of republican liberty are being removed and destroyed, step by step we are approaching a centralized power, and link by link we are forging the chain with which that power may hereafter bind and gall us

"It is painful to have our veneration for that great charter treated with derision, and provoking to have our loytution as the sole authority for this extraordinary legislation, we may well We trust that the people will note feel appalled. If the authority to which

He also referred to the power given Congress by the eleventh section, to "modify or add to" the various conditions prescribed in the bill, as indicative of a purpose to make use of the law hereafter, in furtherance of merely partisan ends. "Give me the control of your schools," he says, "as they may in time be controlled by virtue of this bill, and I care not who make your laws or write your songs." In these remarks Mr. Comingo has aptly pointed out the danger of intrustng by degrees so great an interest as that of the public school system to the management of the general government. The action had in reference to this matter is but one manifestation among many others of the Radical design to seize every opportunity for bringing the people under the yoke of a central oligarchy at Washington. Much has been done already in this direction, and little remains to be done to complete the work, and to use Mr. Comingo's language, "abolish our State organizations"

The Roanoke Fair Association has being organized. The old association had incurred liabilities to the amount of $5,642—to meet which its resources amounted to only $2,475. An effort is sufficient to pay off the old indebtedness, and get the whole property, worth

After Mr. Ricketts was bitten, the dog started off furiously, foaming at the mouth and snapping at everything in his way.-Mr. Sam. Campbell was in the woods hunting near by. The dog spied him, made straight at him, leaped up as if to take him by the throat, and barked the hoarse, dry, rasping bark of rabies .-Mr. Campbell fought him off with his gun. The dog seized the barrel and sunk his teeth into it a few inches from Mr. Campbell's hand, who jumped back a few feet, fired both barrels into his breast, and thus saved his own life .--

STOKES.—Stokes, the eminent Radical who has lately fallen from grace by some mischance of fate, anticipating his tellows in the ignominy of conviction, may now be considered as dead to all political purposes and interests. There is one sin spoken of in the Scriptures, for which there is no atonement. There is another in the Radical church, and Stokes has committed it—that is, to steal and be caught at it. Henceforth, therefore, is the "bald eagle" of Tennessee shorn of his pinions, and droops into oblivion through an obituary. Wm. B. Stokes was a native of the old North State. He was a tar-heel by birth, but his fingers became the stickiest as he grew older.
